The first step to create a new page, you need to edit an existing page, and on it add a link to the page you want to create.

To link to your new page, you must choose a name for it. The best names describe the page's contents well, so that everyone ca
To create a link, surround the page name with double brackets. Typing `[[my new page]]` will create a link to my new page. T

You can see that the links to my new page all have question marks after them. That's because my new page hasn't been written

---

Another way to create a page: in your browser's address bar (where the page URL is), replace the name of the current page wit on the "Edit" link in order to create, edit, and save the new page.

The bad thing about this method is that there are no links to your new page, so you're the only person who knows it is there. It wi

---

Learn more:

● You can also organize related pages into groups, and link between pages in different groups.

How do I create a new page?

Typing [[my new page]] will create a link to the new page. There's a lot you can do with double bracket links.

Why do some new pages have a title with spaces like "Creating New Pages" and others end up with a WikiWord-like title like "Cr

The default page title is simply the name of page, which is normally stored as "CreatingNewPages." However, you can override a name.

Copyright: SchreyP - 18/10/2009